

Summer 2006, Divas For A Cure, “DFAC” will take to the road, traveling from the San Francisco Bay Area to New York, raising funds and awareness to aid in the fight to find a cure for Breast Cancer.

Divas For A Cure is a California Non-Profit Public Benefit Corporation headquartered in Oakland, CA. DFAC was founded by Jan Emanuel out of a very personal experience. Although breast cancer is the most common cancer among women in California, the chance of survival when diagnosed early like Jan is as high as 95%.

DFAC is dedicated to promoting early detection, education, screenings and supporting research organizations to continue the quest to one day find a cure and eradicating cancers of all kinds.

Proceeds from this ride will be dedicated towards the goal of health fairs and educational materials, wig donations for women enduring chemotherapy, mobile breast examines into segments of society that do not ordinarily seek or receive medical attention due to socioeconomic conditions.

It is with your generous support, that DFAC will be a success. Your business or corporation has the opportunity to not only support the DFAC, but benefit from promotional association of the event. In addition, sponsors will benefit from onsite promotion, extensive cross-country media exposure and community representation.

We have not finalized our route as of yet (Itinerary attached) but we will be working towards releasing that information soon. This will be an approximately 22 day vigorous ride! A test of endurance, a journey from the heart with purpose!

We are still seeking sponsors for the run and people to assist along the way. We are asking sponsors to host a fundraiser at their location upon our arrival and/or departure.

For Example: "Diva Day"

Here are some suggested things that would help to make the event and run a success:

- A small ad in your company newsletter announcing the "Divas For A Cure, Summer 2006" event
- A small ad in your company newsletter announcing your local event for the Divas
- A Booth at your location for Rider Sign Up upon our arrival
 - o Refreshments for the Diva Riders upon arrival
 - o Allow us to sell the Divas For A Cure Lapel Pin, Poster and Patches
 - o Donate an item to raffle
- Cash Donation to "Divas For A Cure"

In return, we would acknowledge your company on the Diva web site, printed marketing material and media.

Survivors/In Memory

Here are a few stories and reasons to stay focused on a cure!

Jean Segers

I was diagnosed with breast cancer in March 2000 after a routine mammogram. I underwent surgery including reconstruction in April. I consider myself quite fortunate in that my cancer was in situ, which means it had not spread. Therefore I did not require any radiation or chemotherapy. I believe if it had not been for cancer research, with the development of the mammogram as well as other life saving devices, I may not have been so fortunate. My husband was my rock throughout the entire process and my family and many friends could not have been more supportive. I continue to do whatever I can to support the find for a cure; including buying breast cancer stamps, doing the Ultimate Drive with BMW, supporting Divas for a Cure, etc.

Jean Reilly

Did I know that after having breast cancer at 41 yrs old that my life would be changed forever? Yes, but in the positive ways it has? Now, I am a 2004 rider from Changing Gears returning this year for yet another adventure of a lifetime. Never in my wildest dreams would I have ever seen myself doing the things I do now because of breast cancer. Cancer is such a devastating disease but yet can bring such good things to your life. That is how I have chosen to look at my experience. It has been almost 4 years since that day I heard, "The biopsy was positive." From that day my life has been forever changed. My relationships with my family have grown...my friendships are deeper...my attitude on life has taken a new turn.

I have met some of the most amazing women that have become lifelong friends that I will treasure forever. I live for the moment but yet I look to the future...a future of taking chances, doing those things that I really want to do.

I thank so many for these changes...a very supportive husband who has stood by my side in every decision I've had to make...loving children whom I adore...my dear friends who never let me walk alone...my sisters who are always there for me no matter what...but most of all...my parents....for raising me to see who I really am.

My Mom is the reason I take the chances, the reason I ride...because of her I own a Harley!! Every time I ride, I see her face, feel her touch & hear her voice telling me how proud she is of me, how she is right there with me. Feeling the wind & the freedom.

I look forward to showing other survivors that we are truly warriors that can conquer anything we choose to. I have proven that to myself & want to share that your life can be full, it can have good outcomes from cancer.. look at me now! jeannier.blogspot.com

Still In The Battle...

Janet Downes

My name is Janet Downes and I'm a 7 year breast cancer fighter. I don't call myself a survivor anymore as I've been truly battling this disease. We've gone many rounds in this fight but I refuse to give up or let it beat me. It may win eventually but I'm going to go down swinging hard and leave my own bruises on it.

I am retired from the US Air Force and currently working on a book about my battle with cancer. I had 2 aunts, maternal & paternal die of this awful disease. Along with a third aunt that survived. Cancer was a word that I was familiar with but you never quite understand until it taps YOU on the shoulder.

In 1998 I was about to celebrate my 40th birthday. I had a wedding theme planned for my party and everyone thought I was nuts. Maybe I am a little but I got tired of seeing everything in the stores that was related to '40' being in black. So I decided to poke a little fun at society because I didn't feel old. That coupled with the fact that after 19 years of adulthood, I was finally at a place in my life where I was happy with almost every aspect of my life. I'd been married & divorce twice at that time, yet I no longer needed a man to 'fulfill' me. I had 3 beautiful children (Nicole, Jasmine & Eugene Jr.) and for the first time, was satisfied with my body. You know what I mean ladies? We always seem to feel that our breasts are too small or too big. Always complaining that something is wrong with our hips, butt or legs. We can always find something wrong with ourselves when we look in the mirror. One day I woke up & decided, I was happy with who I was, just the way I was. So that led me to, marrying myself. I didn't know it at the time but that little stunt got me international fame. It seems that I was the first woman to think of it and actually carry it out. It was a beautiful wedding and I am happy with myself, even now.

Two months later, I had cancer. I had a modified bilateral mastectomy and went through 6 months of chemotherapy. The way I describe 1998 is like this; I found myself, married myself, lost both my breast & all of my hair. Whew! What a yea!

I was on the mend and after looking at myself in the mirror and saying, put your money where your mouth is Jan. I knew that I didn't have to have breast to be me. I was still Just Jan. I still loved me and I knew I would be okay. After coming to grips about being breast-less, I decided to get implants. When a doctor told me I could get any size I wanted, I figured, why not? That was my present to myself for enduring what I had just gone through.

I began living life to its fullest when in 2000; I felt a lump under my implant. It had returned. Looking back, the news didn't devastate me as much as the first time, I did it once and could do it again. After taking that lump out, I had 2 months of chemo (all that I could stand because the side effects kicked my butt) and then 7 weeks of radiation. I lost my hair again but even that wasn't as devastating as the first time because I knew it was coming back when all was done. I began to mend again. Smelling the roses if you will. Everything was beautiful. I was alive & that's all that mattered to me.

2002, the cancer returned again, in my collar bone. In 2003 it returned again, twice. In 2004 and so on. That's the short version. Here I am in 2005 and still fighting. I've had 16 surgeries in the past 7 years and am about to start on my 7th regiment of chemotherapy. As I said, I'm not technically a survivor but a fighter.

I don't just fight the cancer; I try to help others through one of the most difficult times in their lives. I joined a group called; The Witness Project because they are a faith based group that goes into churches, schools, anywhere in the community that wants us and give our testimony to other woman. In hopes of teaching more woman about Breast Self exams and standing up for yourself when faced with a diagnosis of cancer. I personally talk to anyone and everyone that I meet. It's all about being empowered. Cancer can, if you let it, strip away your life. I choose not to let it. As Tim McGraw's song says, 'live like you were dying.' That sums up my life now.

Last year I applied to be a part of the group, Changing Gears but I missed the deadline and was heart broken. But I thank God that I was still around this year to apply and was accepted. Women from all over the world applied for the chance to ride. I've always had a special love for Bikes and used to ride years ago. But somehow, I got busy with life & kids and working and didn't make time for it. When I saw the opportunity to get on a bike again, I jumped at it. Since being accepted I took the Riders Edge course and got my endorsement on my license. While I don't have a bike of my own, I've rented a few bikes to prepare for the ride. There is no better feeling than being on the road on a Harley (or whatever you like) it's just you and a powerful machine and the road. The thought of riding with 20 other breast cancer survivors, raising money to help other women smitten with this disease and meeting new people along the way has left me giddy with hope.

I tell people all the time that I'm lucky and blessed. When they hear my story they don't understand how I can say that. The truth is, cancer can teach you if you let it. It's taught me so many things in the past 7 years that I'm amazed every day. Cancer knows no color or age boundaries and because of that I've had to live that same way. I've found new friends and lost others that I thought were friends because of the cancer. I've learned not to sweat the small stuff because there is so much more to life. I've also learned to have less and less pity parties for one because when you think you have it bad, there is someone that's always worst.

I keep holding on, waiting for the Cure. I will ride as long as the good Lord lets me and I will enjoy my life as long as He lets me. I wouldn't have made it this far without God, my family & friends. Especially my brother Ronn who has been like a sister to me. I have two beautiful grandchildren now, Giavonna 3 and Westyn 7 months. No one can tell me, that I am not blessed.

In Memory of Mary Clemons

The Clemons home was where you could always count on a hot meal and good conversation. All the neighborhood kids hung out at the Clemons house. If you needed a place to stay, her door was always open. She was known to just about everyone as "Auntie Mary."

Mary was a homemaker for most of her married adult life. Caring for her husband and children was a full-time job. Mary had never worked outside of the home and thought she had no real skills to offer in the employment world. It was a longtime family friend who convinced her to use her natural mother's wit to care for Special Needs Children through the County of Alameda, Foster Care Program.

After successfully completing all the required classes, Auntie Mary and Uncle Bob began caring for At-Risk Children through the County of Alameda. Many of the children she cared for were infants that had been born drug dependant or were temporary Wards of the Court.

Mary was thrilled at the idea of having a real job. She was almost too excited to cash the first check she had ever earned in life. It was cause to celebrate. For several years, we all got attached to many of the children that came through the Clemons home through the Foster Care Program.

Tragically that would all soon end. In 1998, Mary was diagnosed with an advanced stage of Breast Cancer. Because she had not received regular annual mammograms, the cancer went undetected and as a result, her condition was terminal. Although the hospital did try an aggressive form of chemotherapy, due to her size, and limited available treatments the cancer was considered inoperable. During this lengthy ordeal, Uncle Bob died suddenly of a massive heart attack.

In 2000, Mary succumbed to Breast Cancer. I was there by her side when she whispered her last words to me and then peaceful closed her eyes and passed away. It rendered me helpless. For the first time in my life, there were absolutely no words that could express the pain and agony I was feeling as I watched her slip away.

One of the doctors who performed her final examination said "It was not simply Breast Cancer that caused her death but also obesity." My emotions went from sadness to rage. Not truly understanding that perhaps a routine examination and an annual mammogram were not the only things that were important factors to consider.

Mary's weight made it very uncomfortable and almost impossible for her to get a mammogram. She had struggled with her weight practically all her life and especially after the birth of her children. Medical Research had not developed the technology that is currently in place today; to accommodate women of large stature.

It is with a sense of compassion and through research and education that we will develop the means to treat all patients and eventually find a cure. Mary Clemons is just one example of why every woman should "take it personal."

A unique piece of artwork has been designed by Mr. Lionel Douglass. It is a lapel pin in the shape of lips enameled pink with the words, "a smile for you." Mr. Douglass designed and trademarked this design several years ago in memory of his mother who past away do to cancers she always had a smile for everyone no matter what life brought her way and these words are her legacy "'A Smile For You'." He has distributed this pin to help raise funds for the American Cancer Society in his own home town, Pottstown PA's Relay for Life, "held each year in June. This pin is becoming a well known item in the ongoing fight to help raise funds for cancer research. His lapel pin is hard at work with many charities and will do the same for Divas Ride For A Cure; the pink pin will be available for purchase with a portion of the proceeds going to Divas Ride For A Cure...

Please allow me to introduce myself. My name is Lionel Douglass. I am an inspirational speaker and the author of two books entitled "Something A Daughter Wants, Needs and Should Know" and "Just Because You Are a Boy, Doesn't Mean You Don't Need To Know Who You Are". My goal, as a speaker and author, is to inspire teenage boys and girls to develop safe, happy and trusting relationships by teaching them the importance of understand themselves first.

In addition to being an Author, I have been in the entertainment field since 1973. During that time, I played Big Bird in Sesame Street's live stage and television production for approximately 4 years; I was a personal stand In/Photo double for actor Danny Glover in over 13 films as well as all four Lethal Weapon films. Additionally, I am a former Solid Gold Dancer and have over 50 film credits.

My vision is to share a positive message with as many children that will hear me. Inspiring them to live in a world greater than the one they see in front of them, that world that is within is the greatest gift I believe I have to give.

"Something a Daughter Wants Needs and Should Know" By Lionel Douglass

This book has been designed to challenge daughters' minds with questions they most commonly ask, but usually are left unanswered. Daughters now have the opportunity to discover questions and develop answers from within. On topics, such as, emotions, relationships, self-esteem and dating. These questions will be answered by YOU, the reader.

Rider Profile

Jan Emanuel, "Sunny - The Diva"

It has always been my goal to cultivate a small business that would allow me the freedom to be creative while utilizing my artistic talent, along with the love of photography and computer technology. The internet boom afforded me the opportunity to gain immeasurable experience in the high tech industry. After the tragic and devastating events of 9/11, the face of the DOT.com industry was forever changed and many of us in the United States lost our jobs.

My passion for riding and technology soon drove me to develop a web site that would give women a forum and yet be both fun and informative. What started out as a simple newsletter, has developed into a full-service portal, and the birth of my new baby "RealDivasRide.com."

Bringing women together, showing diversity and sharing the love of riding - - is what the Diva web site is all about. A passion should always have a purpose and blessings should be shared! Perhaps there is no one who has not been affected by cancer, therefore we have dedicated a portion of the proceeds from the sale of our "Diva Rider patch" to Breast Cancer Research.

Gayle E Merritt, "GEM"

Let me introduce myself, my name is Gayle E Merritt, 'GEM'. I have been riding for 25 years. My dream to ride across country could now be a reality. I have lived in the Bay Area for all my life, and in 2004 I purchased my first Harley Davidson Heritage Softail Classic.

I'm currently a member of a H.O.G. chapter and we participate in events all over California. So this opportunity to raise awareness of Breast Cancer across the USA is an opportunity of a lifetime. And in return, I will commit myself for whatever it takes to help the fight against Breast Cancer.

Tammy Bisconer AKA "Tamalicious"

My name is Tammy Bisconer AKA Tamalicious. I am a dedicated mother of four beautiful young ladies'. I have also cared for 12 foster & foreign exchange children. I am a very passionate lady, working hard to make a positive difference in this world of ours. I have a very strong faith in the good in this world shall prevail. I have worked in education for 11 years now; I've gladly volunteered my time over the last 20 years for so many different causes. I find my self throwing my heart & soul into every thing I have gotten involved with. I have been the San Mateo Lady's of Harley Officer for three years now. I love to ride "my baby" that's my Harley name, any day riding is a good day.

It has been an awesome experience for me to have the opportunity to share so many awesome experiences with so many wonderful people. At times I have had to overcome some very challenging things, but with each challenge overcome, I have become a stronger person with each stepping stone.

To see the rewards of my hard work is what drives me on to the next challenge in life. Which brings me to this commitment to take on this adventure wholeheartedly to make a difference to those whom have been & will be affected by breast cancer. I have lost my grandmother to breast cancer, my step mother has cancer. I am driven to do all I can to help in this effort to combat cancer. I am honored to take this trip. I am blessed to have this opportunity to help in the fight against cancer.

Judy-Ann a.k.a Showgirl

Showgirl Knows How to Show Out!

Being a 'good' citizen of the world and Riding my Harley Davidson—Electra Glide classic are my truly passions. The first road trip I took from Las Vegas, NV to 75 miles north of San Francisco, CA was a solo journey. After sharing my experience with other bikers I realized that a woman who dares to ride solo over 700 miles is in a league of her own. When I am supporting my community, I lend the same tenacious, ride the distance energy to projects that make this world a better place for my children and grandchildren. The Divas For A Cure Ride blesses me with the opportunity to unite two of my passions.

All my life I have pushed the envelope, not because I wanted to break any records, but because I crave to 'live my life out loud'. The cathartic experience of riding and supporting a worthy cause will allow me, to honor my faith in God, free my spirit and cleanses my soul of self-imposed limitations. I have ridden over 40,000 miles and each time I roll up my kickstand I think to myself, what a wonderful life I live.

I personally dedicate the Divas For A Cure Ride to every courageous woman who has fought breast cancer. You will be the wind of courage beneath my Harley Wings...

Rider Profile – Dudes Supporting Divas For Cure

Michael Proctor, "Trailblazer"

I have always felt compelled to involve myself in community-based organizations. I have volunteered countless hours throughout the years to assist others that were under-represented, uninformed, or underprivileged. I welcome and appreciate the opportunity to be involved in "Divas For A Cure". It is critical to do what we can to educate our community in the early prevention and education of breast cancer, so that our mothers, sisters and daughters can learn to live healthy lives. The numbers currently are staggering and the irony of it all is that through early detection, loss of life or mastectomy can be avoided. As a man, I was quite surprised to learn that even men can be subject to breast cancer.

I have been involved in motorcycling for close to 30 years now. Currently I am a member of the nationwide "Buffalo Soldiers Motorcycle Club" which promulgates the history of the true Buffalo Soldiers, as well as culminate good ridership and road safety.

As "Road Captain" for "Divas For A Cure", I welcome the challenges of ensuring that our groundbreaking excursion across the United States is one where we all stay safe with minimal hindrances to the success of our mission. The Buffalo Soldiers were used throughout the settlement of the west for countless assignments, one as escorts. So it is only fitting that a "Buffalo Soldier" escort the cross-country excursion for "Divas For A Cure".
